The steel corporation admitted that these convicts were employed, just as I stated, on the floor of the house, and, worse than all that, the reason given by the steel corporation was that the free miners were members of the United Mine Workers of America, that, unable to import strike breakers from the north, they utilized the scab convicts from the prisons of Birmingham. I felt that this condition deserved exposure and condemnation, and I ex-

I am just in receipt of a letter which speaks for itself:

Robert Wickliffe Woolley's Letter. Treasury Department, Washington, March 23, 1914. Hon. A. O. Stanley, House of Representa

Dear Mr. Stanley-Far be it from me to become involved in the contest which you and my esteemed relative and friend, Governor Beckham, are waging for the mocratic senatorial nomination in Kentucky, but in justice to you I feel that it is necessary to clear up one or two points concerning which Mr. Beckham has either been misinformed or is laboring under an oneous impression.

A few days ago I read in the Lexington Herald a report of his Elizabethtown speech, in which he quoted the Hon. Oscar Underwood to the effect that you had made a statement unwarranted by the facts. I recall the colloquy between you and the latter very well. Underwood was denying that the Steel corporation employed convict labor in its mines. You gave as your authority a Mr. Harrison, an expert investigator in the employ of the Survey, who had testified before your nittee concerning this very employment of convicts in the coal mines of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company and the iniquitous manner in which the unfortunates were treated. What you should have done was to quote John G. Oakley, president of the Alabama state board of convicts, who testified before your committee on Feb. 12, 1912, that not only was mittee on Feb. 12, 1812, that not only was the Tennessee Coal and Iron company employing at that very time county con-victs in their mines, but that the president of the company, Mr. George Gordon Craw-ford, bad, made strangens offerts to reford, had made strenuous efforts to renew in November, 1911, the contract with the state of Alabama for state convicts then about to expire.

and I both have the highest regard and esteem as a friend, was not fully informed when he undertook to challenge your statement on the floor of the house. Acting under general directions from you, I investigated fully the Steel corporation's operations at Birmingham and then went to Montgomery and inspected the contracts between the Tennessee Coal and Iron company and the state of Ala-

Of course Mr. Underwood, for whom you

Mr. Beckham seemed bent upon making light of the importance of the investiga-tion of the Steel corporation. I hardly would do so were he to talk to Mr. Louis D. Brandeis, who stated to me not more than a month ago that in exosing the relations between the industrial and the common carrier and the in-iquities of the interlocking directorate the work of your committee had been of in-estimable value; that as an ex-Kentuckian he was proud of the fact that a Ken-tuckian had directed such an inquiry. Furthermore, Judge J. M. Dickinson, exsecretary of war and at present special as bootleggers and blind tigers. States in charge of the government's suit to dissolve the Steel corporation under the Sherman anti-trust law, has told me everal times that but for this investigation that great suit would never have been brought. On one occasion he asked me to say to you that he would be very glad to state over his signature just how greatly he esteemed your work.

Recently I have read Professor Charles R. Van Hise's much talked of work "Conntration and Control." It is only necessary to note how often he refers to the secured from the hearings and report. Of ourse Governor Beckham would not have ade such statements had he been correctly informed.

R. W. WOOLLEY. Beckham and Stanley at Platform Convention.

Mr. Beckham draws a parallel between his conduct and my own at the last so called platform convention. I do not shrink from the comparison. I did not attend the convention at my home, nor did I directly or indirectly attempt to influence the vote of any man who did attend it.

When the question was raised in the county convention as to the propriety of instructing the delegates on the so called county unit plank, the wets, led party action impossible for long years toby an excellent gentleman, my most relentless political adversary, carried the day for the wets, and the delegates were bound hand and foot by ironclad instructions to vote against the county unit plank. This gentleman is now an Beckham's cause.

I attended the session of that convention at Louisville but a few hours. As an act of courtesy my friends and al and social in its nature. Very sincerel neighbors in that delegation on several occasions delegated me to cast its vote. and I, of course, followed the instructions by which I was bound and for which I was in no way responsible, directly or indirectly, and this is how. as Mr. Beckham says, I happened to "boastfully cast the votes of Henderson county against the county unit plank.

Then it was that Bob Franklin, Ben Marshall, myself and others rushed to the stage and earnestly pleaded with the outraged delegates not to kick the man down the stairs, who at this time would assume to have been their idol and their hero

McCreary Puts County Unit Plank In Platform

The very men who put the county unit plank in the Democratic platform, like the real leaders of the temperance cause in the Kentucky legislature, have eternally branded the hypocritical leadership of Mr. Beckham as an imposture and a sham.

That plank was written in the platform because a majority of the delegates felt that the candidate's opinions and and the party's utterance should be in full accord, and, Governor McCreary having insisted that it should be included in the report of the committee in resolution, his wishes in the matter were respected and obeyed. Mr. Beckham's self lauded harangue before that body, "like the flowers that bloom in the spring, had nothing to do with the thing at all."

Wilson Favors Local Option.

President Wilson has discussed this subject with such cogency and frankness that I am willing to unhesitatingly and absolutely commend and accept every sentence and every syllable of that utterance as the exact and accurate expression of my views upon this vexed question:

We were, says Justice Neil, 'I'N. ABLE TO PERCEIVE ANY SOUND AN-SWER TO THIS CONTENTION. Equally well established is the proposition that the right to send liquors from one state into another and the act of sending the same is interstate commerce, the regula-tion whereof has been committed by the constitution of the United States to congress, and hence that a state law which denies such a right or substantially interferes with or hampers the same is in con flict with the constitution of the United Wilson's Cabinet on Webb Bill.

Does any man believe that Woodrov Vilson would take into his official family, would intrust with grave and responsible duties involving the security and honor of his party and his country, a cowardly and subservient tool of the liquor interests? Mr. Beckham has the same right to charge the president with packing his cabinet with emissaries of the whisky trust as he has to charge me with being such an emissary. Three members of the federal congress who voted on this measure are now in the president's cabinet, and out of the three two of them voted against it because they believed it to be unconstitutional. Hon. W. C. Redfield secretary of commerce and labor, and Hon. A. S. Burleson, now postmaster gen eral of the United States, voted just as 1 when I did and for the same reason

The sage of Monticello, with the audacity of genius, turned his back upon all the precedents and fine spun fallacies of 4,000 years of civilization. He took a man, a simple citizen, endowed him with inhere and inalienable rights, clothed him with all power and authority, crowned him with a ballot, and the trembling monarch the world cowered before the towering creation of this mighty American.

This plan, original and sublime in its simplicity, crystallized into law, became the priceless legacy of succeeding generations, "the sheet anchor of our lib the constitution of the United States.

Farm and Garden

RAISING SMALL FRUITS.

Currants, Raspberries, Gooseberries and Blackberries Are Easily Grown.

Small fruits, such as currants, raspberries, gooseberries and blackberries are easily grown, and almost every gardener finds it profitable to have a People in Tibet value highly the few bushes of each kind on his place. The gooseberry is not made as much use of by American housewives as is the case in England, where it is a favorite small fruit, but in recent years the excellence of its food qualities has become recognized.

On a small place a dozen raspberry bushes may be planted without encroaching much on the garden plot. There are several varieties, the most familiar being the red and purple. There are also the pink and yellow

BLACK AND RED RASPBERRIES. and the blackcap. The red is for table use, and the black and purple are for canning purposes.

The plants should be set out as early as possible in spring after the ground has been plowed, harrowed, and worked over until it is fine and met low-almost pulverized, in fact. The soil should have had a covering of stable manure dug or forked into it and in general have been made rich in the essentials of plant food. Both the raspberry and blackberry are gross feeders, almost as much so as the grapevine, and require good ground. Before putting in the plants they should be cut back to six or eight inch tops. They should be stuck into the ground as deep as they stood in the garden of the grower from whom they were purchased. This may be readily seen by the earth marks on each plant.

They may be set out in any one of three ways-in furrows, in hills or according to what is called the bush plan. Mrs. Givens Terrill of Lancaster and The Close of Business June 30,1914 The particular system to be employed is for the individual gardener to deis for the individual gardener to determine for himself, and in doing so he will be guided largely by the extent and shape of his plot.

The bush method is probably best adapted for a small place. Furrows are plowed six feet apart, and the plants are set in them at intervals of about three feet. During growth in summer the plants are trained into bushes by being pinched or cut back. The leading or principal shoot should be allowed to reach a height of not more than three and a half feet, and all laterals should be started near the ground and be held back to some eighteen or twenty inches in length. The plants will be bushy and will present a beautiful appearance, but this method calls for considerable pruning by the gardener.

Salt For Asparagus.

Salt on asparagus beds will kill the weeds and benefit the asparagus. Kai nit, or German potash salt, is better than salt, but is somewhat more expensive. After kainit is applied it should be worked into the top soil with a rake. A little later when the asparagus is growing well a dressing of nitrate of soda will be very beneficial.

BEES AND ALFALFA.

Investigations of the United States lepartment of agriculture have shown that a mistaken notion has been held regarding the kinds of bees that aid alfalfa seed. While "leaf cutter" bees will "trip" about 90 per cent of the flowers they visit and bumblebees about 50 per cent. honeybees trip less than 5 per cent. Even though a honeybee trips only 5 per cent of the flowers it visits the great number of such bees that can be kept on an aifalfa field, taken in connection with their activity, compensate for the low efficiency of each bee.

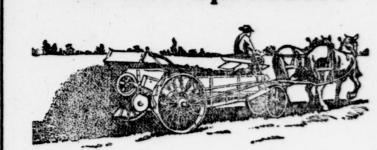

The wild bees that are most efficient in tripping do not store up honey of commercial value, nor is there any way known of holding them permanently in any locality.

Certain investigators have thought that some species of bee from the native land of alfalfa might prove more valuable than others. If such could be found and introduced the yield of alfalfa seed might be materially increased. There are so many different kinds of bees in different parts of the world that there is considerable room or experiment.

MONEY IN ANGORAS.

Mohair Producing Goat Can Be Profitably Raised on American Farms. [Prepared by United States department of

The Angora goat, although it needs attention, could be raised on any American farm, states an expert of the department of agriculture. In Montana the flocks face the heavy snowfalls with equanimity as long as a dry place is provided for them at night, and, though the heat in the southwest frequently makes it necessary to shear twice a year in order to prevent shedding, it does not otherwise prevent the health of the flocks. High land is the native home of all goats, and pure water is also essential in connection with their production.

Although nearly every state in the Union now possesses its flocks, the southwest and the northwest are especially well adapted to the industry, in particular the large areas recently logged off in the northwest. There the Angora not only thrives itself, but helps to clear away the brush. Thus it is often said that the Angora works and pays for its board at the

It is paying more and more, for the value of the fleece, or mohair, is increasing steadily. The price, of course, varies with the quality, the very best fleeces bringing on an average from 42 to 55 cents a pound. The weight of a fleece has a very wide range, but in 1909 the average for Oregon was found to be 3.7 pounds and for Texas 1.85. On account of the greater heat, however, and the damage of shedding Angoras in the southwest are frequently shorn twice a year, a fact which must be taken into consideration in all calculations.

Six inches is the shortest length of fleece usually desired, and because of shearing twice a year much Texas and New Mexico mohair falls below this standard. Where the fleece is allowed to grow for twelve months the average length is ten inches, and in the best flocks it is not unusual to get fifteen to twenty inches. Romeo, the sweep-

1910, is an example of what is possible. His fleece weighed eighteen pounds, measured twenty and three-quarter inches in length and sold for $115. Such fleece is not, of course, the product of ordinary commercial conditions. It implies a considerable amount of care and personal attention. The birth rate of Angoras is approximately 65 per cent, but in well managed flocks this has risen on occasions as high as 120 per cent. Since the kids are not hardy it is obvious that this means skill and industry during the breeding season; otherwise the management of Angoras does not differ greatly from that of sheep. They will feed with cattle and sheep, and, though in some danger of being kicked, with horses also. As a matter of fact, however, the goat prefers a certain amount of rough pasture and is particularly happy when clearing up brush land. On very rough land the danger of injury to the fleece must, however, be kept in mind.

Curing Cowpea Hay.

Cowpeas are cut and cured about the same as clover or alfalfa bay. It is a common practice to let the cowpeas remain in the swath from twenty-four to thirty-six hours before raking and cocking. It is the practice of some to run a tedder over the field as soon as the upper leaves have wilted. If left in the swath for thirty-six hours and then put into cocks, in favorable weather the hay will be ready to put into the barn in two or three days. Two or three hours before hauling to the barn the cocks should be opened and exposed to the sun and air.

Keep the Plow Bright. Take care of your plow. When you are through with your day's work cover the metal parts instead of allowing them to remain exposed to the damp night air and rust until next morning. When you store your plow in the shed rub a little grease of any kind over the moldboard, share and land side. This will effectively prevent rust, and the grease will be rubbed off as soon as ou put the plow in the ground again.

Egyptian Cotton Seed. The federal horticultural board has issued a notice to all cotton mills and especially those in the south to destroy by burning all seed that may be found in bales of imported Egyptian cotton. These seed are likely to contain the larvae of the pink bollworm, which is very destructive to American

No Civilized Man Wants to Live Where There Are No Churches—Go to Church!

The church is the best institution the world has ever known from every standpoint-moral, economic and political. It has changed the world from HEATHENISM TO CIVILIZA-TION, from SLAVERY TO FREEDOM, from MIGHT TO RIGHT, from DARKNESS TO LIGHT, from MISERY TO HAPPINESS. Compare the conditions prevailing in heathen lands with those of Christian countries; the forms of government in the dark ages to those of the Christian lands today.

CAN ANY ONE BELIEVING IN GOD GIVE ANY REASON FOR NOT GOING TO CHURCH? THE CHURCH STANDS FOR THE PURITY AND SANCTITY OF THE HOME, THE PURITY AND REC-TITUDE OF PERSONAL LIFE, THE HIGHEST MORALS, THE BEST LAWS. IT STANDS FOR JUSTICE, RIGHTEOUSNESS AND GOOD GOVERNMENT. IT IS THE GREAT INSTIGATOR AND PA-TRON OF ALL TRUE BENEVOLENCE. SKEPTICISM NEVER FOUNDED AN ASYLUM. THE CHURCH, NOT INFIDELITY, HAS FOUNDED THE GREAT ELEEMOSYNARY INSTITUTIONS OF THE

The value of the church cannot be estimated. No civilized man wants to live where there is no church. He wants it for its influence, if for nothing else. Take the church out of any town or city and the citizen will take himself out. Take the church out and all evil will prevail, and from an economic standpoint property becomes worthless.

THE MISSION OF THE CHURCH IS TO SAVE THE WORLD. DOES IT MERIT ANYTHING AT THE HANDS OF ITS PRO-FESSED FOLLOWERS? IF SO, LET US STAND BY IT AND AT-TEND ITS SERVICES. IT IS A DUTY AS WELL AS A PLEAS-URE. INDIVIDUAL RESPONSIBILITY WILL NOT DOWN. LET US ASSUME IT CHEERFULLY AND RESPOND VALIANTLY.

Be sure to GO TO CHURCH next Sunday!

An Angling Story.
While fishing for pike in the River Waveney recently, Mr. E. Norman of the Brockdish (Norfolk) Angling society hooked a fish, but his line broke just above the swivel, to which the hook is attached. Throwing in again, he hooked, as he thought, another pike, but found that the lost swivel, bearing the hooked pike, had caught in his new set of hooks. He was thus able to land his original catch.

This system may be adapted to severe winter conditions by drawing the colony houses together in a convenient place at the beginning of winter, thus reducing the labor during the cold months. The first system is more suited for hens used solely for the production of market eggs than for those used to breed stock. Fences mean an outlay of money. and this outlay is more or less continuous, as they must be maintained after being installed. There should be as few fences as possible dividing the lots and the yards, as land can be kept sweet more easily if not fenced. and fresh, sweet land is a valuable asset in poultry raising.

On good soil a greensward may be kept up by allowing 200 to 250 square feet of land per bird. This means 217 or 174 birds per acre. More space is necessary on poor or light land. A larger number of fowls is usually kept to the acre where double yards are used and the land is frequently cultivated. Plymouth Rocks and the other heavy meat breeds in small yards require fences five to six feet high. while a fence six to seven feet high is necessary for Leghorns. The upper two feet of the fence for the latter may be inclined inward at an angle of 30 degrees or a strand of barbed wire may be used on top of the regular wire to keep them confined. It is also sometimes necessary to clip the wing feathers of one wing of those birds that persist in getting out. A board or strip along the top of the fence is not advisable. Hens will often fly over such an arrangement.

In setting up and operating an incubator follow the directions of the manufacturer. The equipment of most incubators is so subject to change that particular lamps, regulators, etc., cannot be recommended. A pure water supply is one of the most important factors in farm life today, as typhoid fever, dysentery and other disorders may be carried by impure waters. Farm water supplies are very subject to pollution. Of seventynine typical water supplies in Minne sota investigations showed that twen ty were good and fifty-nine polluted. Twenty-five of those polluted were bad only because of poor surface protection and could easily have been made safe. Practically all the surface supplies were polluted. During these investigations twenty-three of the farms examined showed a record of typhoid fever.

There should also be suitable provision for straining or filtering the water previous to its entrance to the cistern.

Farm wells are often polluted from local sources. They are often located for convenience near the barn or stable or close to the back door, out of which household slops are thrown. The soil surrounding the well becomes saturated with organic filth and allows the Unpolluted springs are, as a rule, ood sources of water supply, since the rater usually comes from great depths within the rock or is filtered through any layers of sand and gravel. Farm spring supplies are often polluted by the drainage from buildings and stock pens. Spring water supplies from limestone are also subject to pollution from distant garbage and sewage dumps in sink holes. The same precautions should be taken for safeguarding spring supplies as in the case of wells, and in addition the spring should always be fenced to keep

She Won Success In Her Role as Cupid

By WALTER L. W. DISTELHORST

Little did No. 28's first customer that Monday morning realize how much of her happiness she was going to owe to those six silver plated teaspoons. No. 28 had just returned from the jewelry department, where with her slender savings she had bought the spoons for her widowed mother's silver wedding anniversary, less than two weeks off. She was returning from the art department. "Good morning," the stranger began timidly, holding out a photograph.

On the back of the photograph in a man's hand was written "Jack Dawless no other supply is available. Rain- son." Just above the signature there water from the roof is often polluted had once been something else-as if by dust, leaves and the droppings from the picture had been inscribed to somebirds. Any person who drinks water body-but the words had been erased. No. 28 was passing the picture along the bits of molding when the girl stop-

She stepped to the window with the photograph and the bit of polished wood to view the effect in the light, while the girl behind the counter reach-

"Not before?"

With those brown eyes on her No. 28 almost promised to get the frame made that same day. "We're very busy now, you know,"

she replied in her most businesslike manner, however. "It may not be ready even then, but we'll do our best." No. 28 sent the picture to the shop upstairs. Soon she was so busy with other customers that she forgot about the girl with the wistful eyes and about the photograph with the erased inscription. But it all came back to her very vividly after lunch time when a young man appeared at her counter.

It was the young man of the picture! He asked to see samples of molding for picture frames. At the rack he drew a picture from his pocket, but he did not intrust it to No. 28's hands, and he himself selected the molding while she stood by. "I'll call on Friday morning at 10o'clock sharp." he said. "I'm going away"-he hesitated an instant-"and L want to take it with me." "John W. Dawson, Civil Engineer," read the card that he left with the photograph.

But the photograph-it was a portrait of the girl who had been in the store that very morning! A perplexed littlewrinkle showed itself in No. 28's fore-

When Molly knelt at her mother's bedside late that night and whispered a little sécret into her ear Mrs. Dolan first said:

"Darlin', I'm glad, for Tom will make ye a good man!"

Then she told her daughter how she could make the brown eyed girl happy

Late on Tuesday afternoon the young woman's picture, which was not to have been ready before the following day, was sent down from the shop, "John W. Dawson," No. 28 said to herself as she gazed at the face behind the glass, "if you knew what fate has in store for your photograph you

No. 28 was nervous all the next day and looked up apprehensively at every customer who approached her counter Afternoon came at last and with it the girl who wanted to take home the pic ture. No. 28 recognized her the instant she appeared in the aisle. She kept her eyes fastened on her order book, however, and feigned surprise when the customer asked:

"Is my picture ready?" "I'm sorry, but it won't be finished till 10 o'clock Friday. Will you call then or shall we send it?" said No. 28.
